Noticed that Stevens was grieved.

Stevens left the beach immediately after receiving the telegram, hurrying away, practically running towards his house.

Eger told him that he would gather his fishing things together and take them to his, Stevens', home.

Eger followed Stevens after gathering up his tackle.

He went direct to the Stevens' home and talked with Henry S. about the possibility of getting a train to New Brunswick. Stevens took just long enough to pack his grip and change his clothes.

Asked Eger, as he had to leave hurriedly and no one was at home, would he, Eger, spend the night at Stevens' home.

OBSERVATIONS ON OPERATION OF AUTOMOBILE BY HENRY STEVENS.

Has never seen Stevens drive any other automobile but his Ford station wagon, nor any gear shift car.
